

Contents

Introduction	11
1. The Principle of Deductive Closure	17
1.1 Deductive Completeness	19
1.2 Closure or Completeness by Definition	23
1.3 The Principle of Deductive Closure and Rules of Inference	23
1.4 The Relation of Closure of the Components to the Closure of Knowledge	24
1.5 The Deductive Closure of Belief	26
1.5.1 Belief Closure as an Analytical Principle	28
1.5.1.1 Modal Concepts of Belief	28
1.5.1.2 Explicit vs. Implicit Belief and Occurrent vs. Tacit Belief	33
1.5.2 Conditions for Belief Ascription	38
1.5.3 Conclusions from the Considerations of Belief Closure for the Question of Knowledge Closure ...	41
2. The Challenge to Closure	45
2.1 Irving Thalberg's Defence of the Justified True Belief Analysis of Knowledge	47
2.2 Fred Dretske	55
2.2.1 Epistemic Operators	55
2.2.2 Conclusive Reasons	60
2.2.3 Relevant Alternatives	64
3. Reactions to the Challenge	73
3.1 Closure: a Non-contextualist Account	75
3.2 An Early Contextualist Approach	86
3.3 Contextualism Systematically	89
3.3.1 What is a Context?	90
3.3.2 Context Changes	93

3.4 Concerns and Questions: Towards Non-conversational Contextualism	103
3.5 Conclusion	108
4. Tracking, Closure and Contextualism: Nozick, DeRose and Schiffer	111
4.1 Robert Nozick's Concept of Knowledge and Deductive Closure	111
4.2 Contextualism and Tracking	130
4.3 Contextualism and the Semantics of Knowledge Ascriptions	140
5. Closure and the Structure of Epistemic Projects	149
5.1 Epistemic Projects: Questions and Inquiry	152
5.2 Context and Inquiry	158
5.3 Epistemic Contextualism and Closure	162
5.3.1 Why Can the 'Standards' Not Be Lowered Again? ..	163
5.3.2 Deduction	164
5.3.3 Does the Proposed Account Fulfil the Adequacy Conditions?	166
5.3.4 The Formulation of the Assumptions	170
5.3.5 Formal or Constrained Contextualism?	170
5.3.6 A Further Counterexample to Closure	171
5.3.7 Conclusion	173
5.4 The Status of Epistemic Contextualism	173
5.5 Problems and Prospects for Epistemic Contextualism	177
Conclusion	185
Bibliography	189
Principles discussed	194
Subject Index	195
Name Index	198